BIOGRAPHY

Laura is an Associate in the Halifax office of Cox & Palmer. She maintains a busy immigration law practice and is a member of our corporate and commercial group.

She works with clients to help prepare and submit a wide range of immigration applications, including applications for permanent residence under the Family Class, the Atlantic Immigration Program, and a variety of Provincial Nominee Program applications, as well as applications for temporary residence, such as Work Permits, Study Permits and Temporary Resident Visas. Laura also helps her clients to navigate complex issues pertaining to their immigration status. Laura is the recent past Chair of the Citizenship and Immigration Section of the Canadian Bar Association's Nova Scotia Chapter.

Prior to completing her law degree at the Schulich School of Law, Laura attended Saint Mary's University where she earned an Honours degree in psychology.
