BIOGRAPHY

Michelle was admitted to the Newfoundland and Labrador Bar in 1999, having completed her law degree at Dalhousie University (LLB, 1998).

Michelle practices primarily management-side employment and labour law, acting on behalf of provincially and federally regulated employers. In 25 years of practice, Michelle has advised employers in public health, social enterprise, municipal government, post-secondary education, and private industry on all aspects of workplace law. She is familiar with and has advised employers about both provincial and federal legislation. Michelle has also advised administrative panels in health authorities in relation to investigations conducted, and discipline imposed, under Medical Staff Bylaws. She is a committee member of the Disciplinary Panel of the Law Society of Newfoundland and Labrador.

Michelle has appeared before various administrative tribunals and before all levels of court in the Province and before the Federal Court, Trial Division.
